"ACUS is a public-private partnership designed to make government work better."

- President Barack Obama

July 8, 2010

With the Senate's confirmation of Paul Verkuil as Chairman, the Administrative Conference of the United States (ACUS) has been re-established after an absence of over 14 years. ACUS was created in 1968 as an independent agency of the federal government, for the purpose of developing recommendations to improve the fairness and effectiveness of the rulemaking, adjudication, licensing, and investigative functions of federal agency programs

The Administrative Conference Project Process

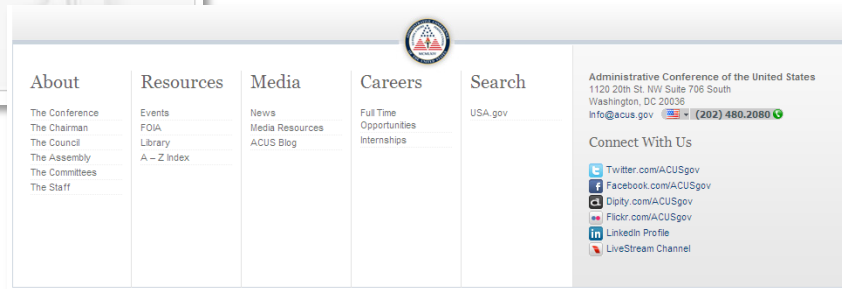

The Conference's research and the resulting recommendations are conducted through the Administrative Conference Project Process. The process includes: gathering and selecting ideas for a project, getting Council approval for a project, selecting the researcher for a project, having the researcher's report considered by a committee, having the selected committee formulate a recommendation, having a committee's recommendation considered by the Council and then the full Conference membership, and activities to get an official Conference recommendation implemented. The graphic shown below illustrates and describes the steps involved in preparing a recommendation.
